

Helping to support colleagues returning to the workplace

The Challenge

As Covid-19 restrictions were relaxed, and organisations resumed operations, thoughts turned to how to transition furloughed and remote-working employees back to the workplace.

This would be no “back to normal”. Measures were introduced to ensure safety and these needed to be securely communicated whilst providing advice and support for employee wellbeing. This would involve a combination of business-wide and manager-to-team communication.

The Solution

The Hollaroo platform was chosen, primarily due to its ease of deployment (time was pressing!) and flexibility to deal with the ever changing furlough landscape.

The “Ricoh Lounge” became a single place to stay engaged with the business and colleagues as well as planning for a safe return. Along with content delivery, checklists for employees and groups for discussions, there is even a Social Wall where people could share their experiences whilst away.

System ready to deploy in three weeks

Tailored approach for different workforces

Managers able to support own team

“Hollaroo understood our need to prioritise the wellbeing of our colleagues and swiftly developed a highly engaging, effective and easy-to-use platform that has allowed us to keep those on furlough firmly involved. The design, development and roll-out was seamless and their on-going responsiveness has been outstanding.”
